For today's presentation, I'd like to talk about animals and stress. Just like humans, animals get _____ 9 too. And of course, stress is bad for them. Playing loud music, changing their food, or coming home late from school can all stress them out. So, if you have a pet, always check if your pet is happy and _____. 10 Well, how do you know if your pets are under stress? Look for unusual signs. Some dogs start licking themselves a lot. Some cats may start hiding for a long time. And some birds may bite more than usual. Remember, animals don't talk. So, always pay attention to your pets' _____! 11

Here, we have two people with completely different diets: Kyle is a vegan, and Emily is a carnivore. Kyle only eats plant-based foods, like apples, carrots, rice, tofu, and olive oil. He _____ 12 to be a vegan because he cares about animals and the environment. On the other hand, Emily only eats meat and animal-based foods like beef, chicken, fish, ham, and cheese. Emily believes meat is easier to _____ 13 than vegetables. However, neither of their diets are perfect. There's almost no vitamin B12 in a vegan diet, and very little vitamin C in a carnivorous diet. So, for children, Kyle and Emily both suggest eating a well-balanced diet.
