It's Monday morning.
"We're leaving in 10 minutes!"
calls Dad, "or we will be late!"

"I lost my Lego pirate!" calls Dan.
"It's not in the toy box." "You can go without it," says Dad.

"I lost my rabbit," says Sophie. "It's not in my school bag." "You can go without it," says Dad.

"I can't find my phone," says Mom. "It was in my pocket." "You can go without it," says Dad.

Jack and Ben are twins.
They look alike and dress alike.

They go to school together,
and they play together.

They share a bedroom at home.
Jack likes to build model airplanes.
Ben likes to help.

The plane is done.
"Wow! Let me see," says Ben.
"What a fantastic plane!"

It was a nice day.
Kenny and Anna went camping with Dad.

They put up the tent and pumped up the airbeds.

When their campsite was set up, they sat down to have a drink. Kenny put the lid of his drink bottle on the table.

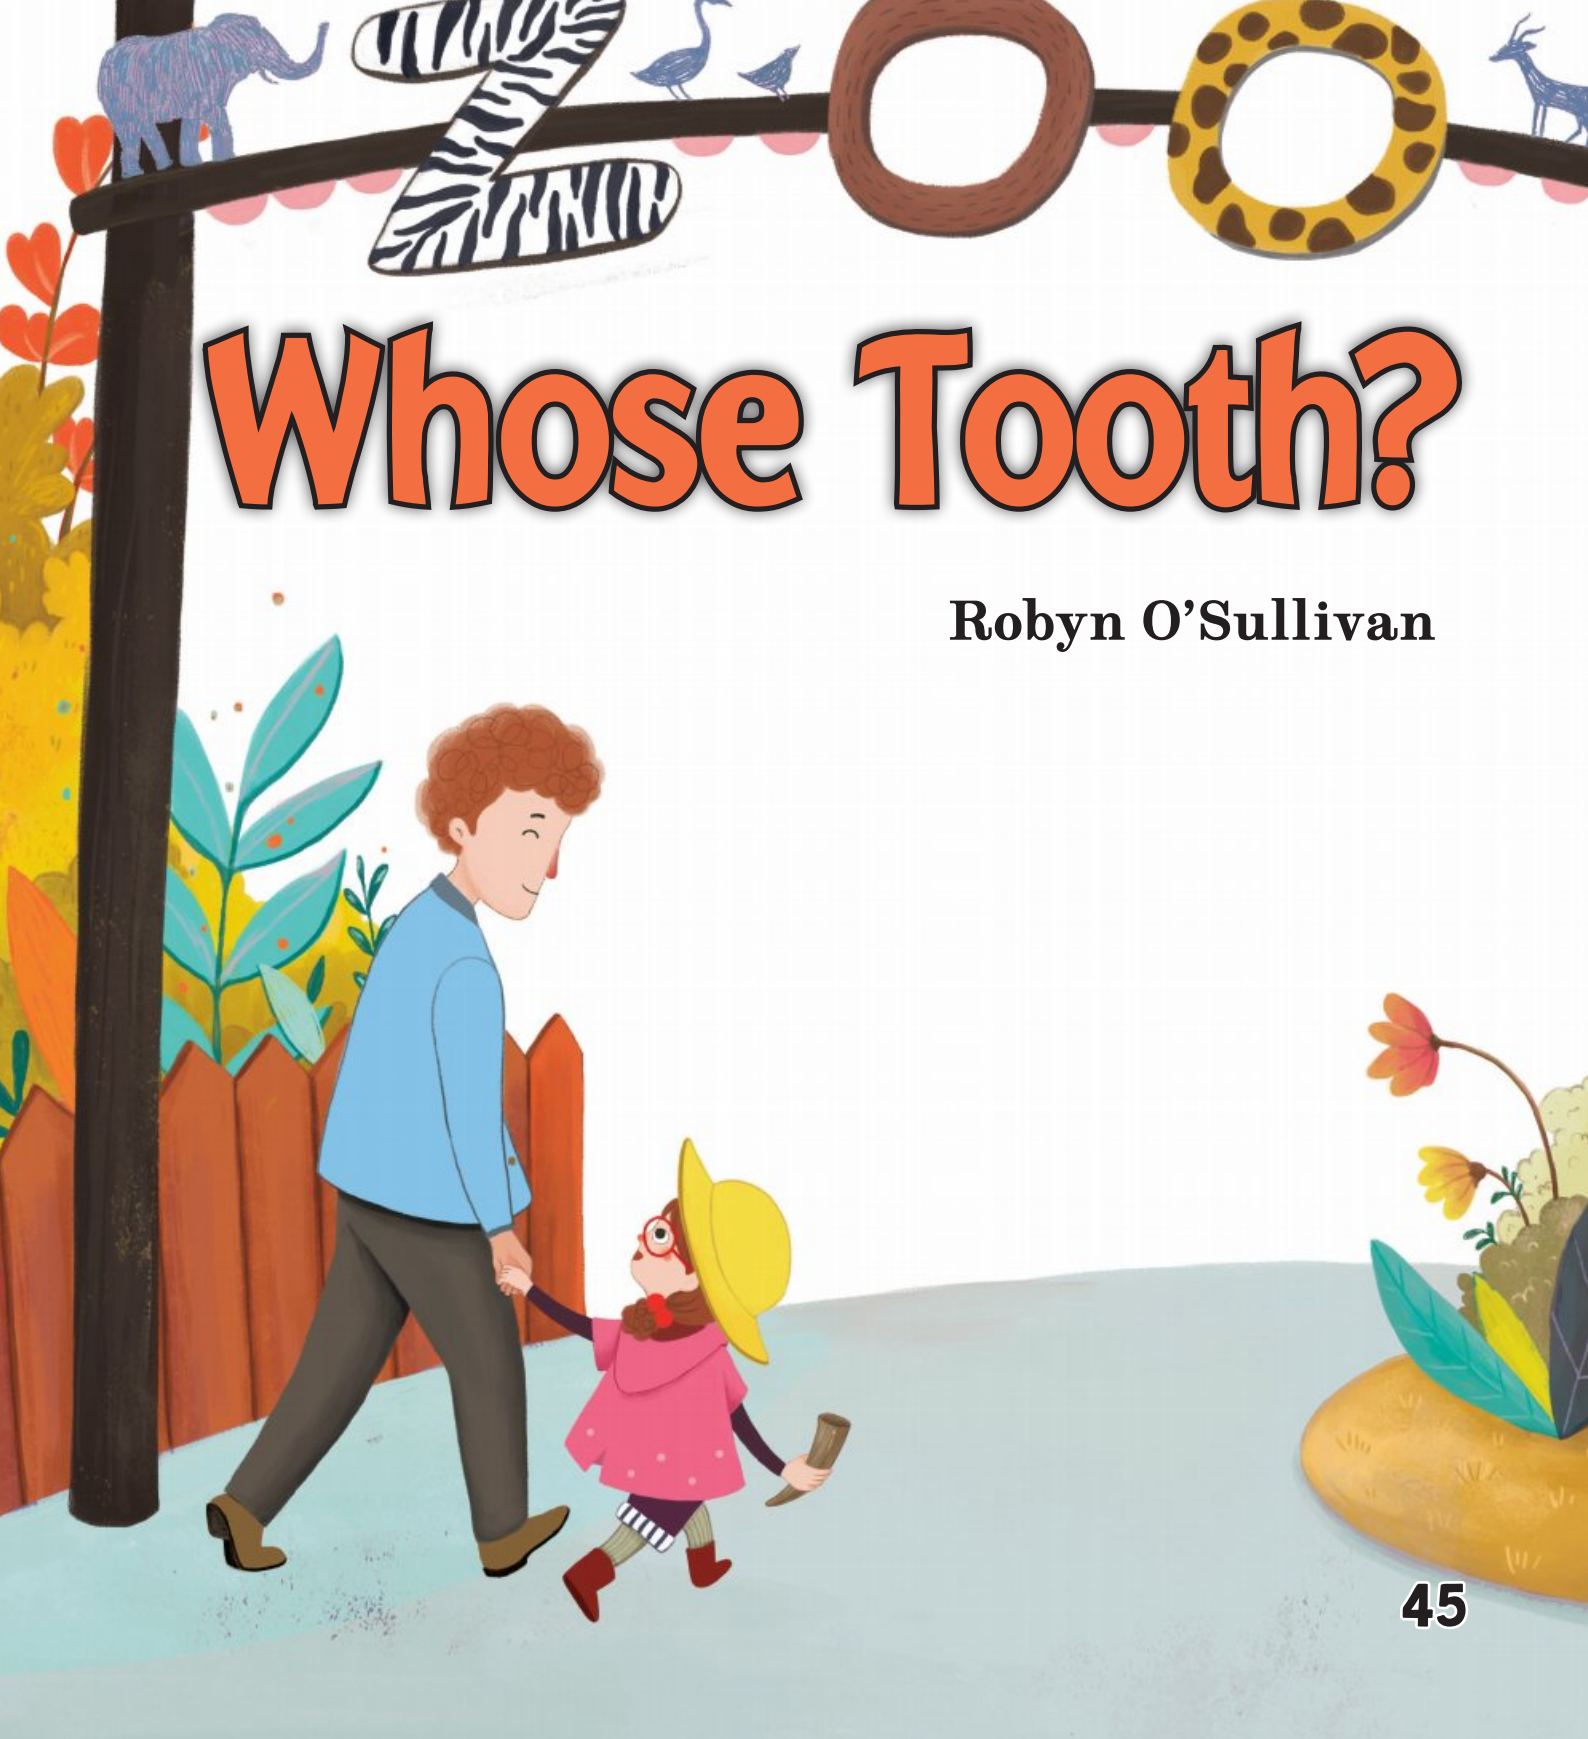

Then they decided to go walking. But Kenny couldn't find the lid so he had to go without it.

Sally's dad found a very big tooth at work.

He took the tooth home.
“Who has teeth this big?” asked Sally.
“Let’s go to the zoo to find out,” said Dad.

Sally and Dad first went to see the elephants. "It's smaller than an elephant tusk," said Sally.

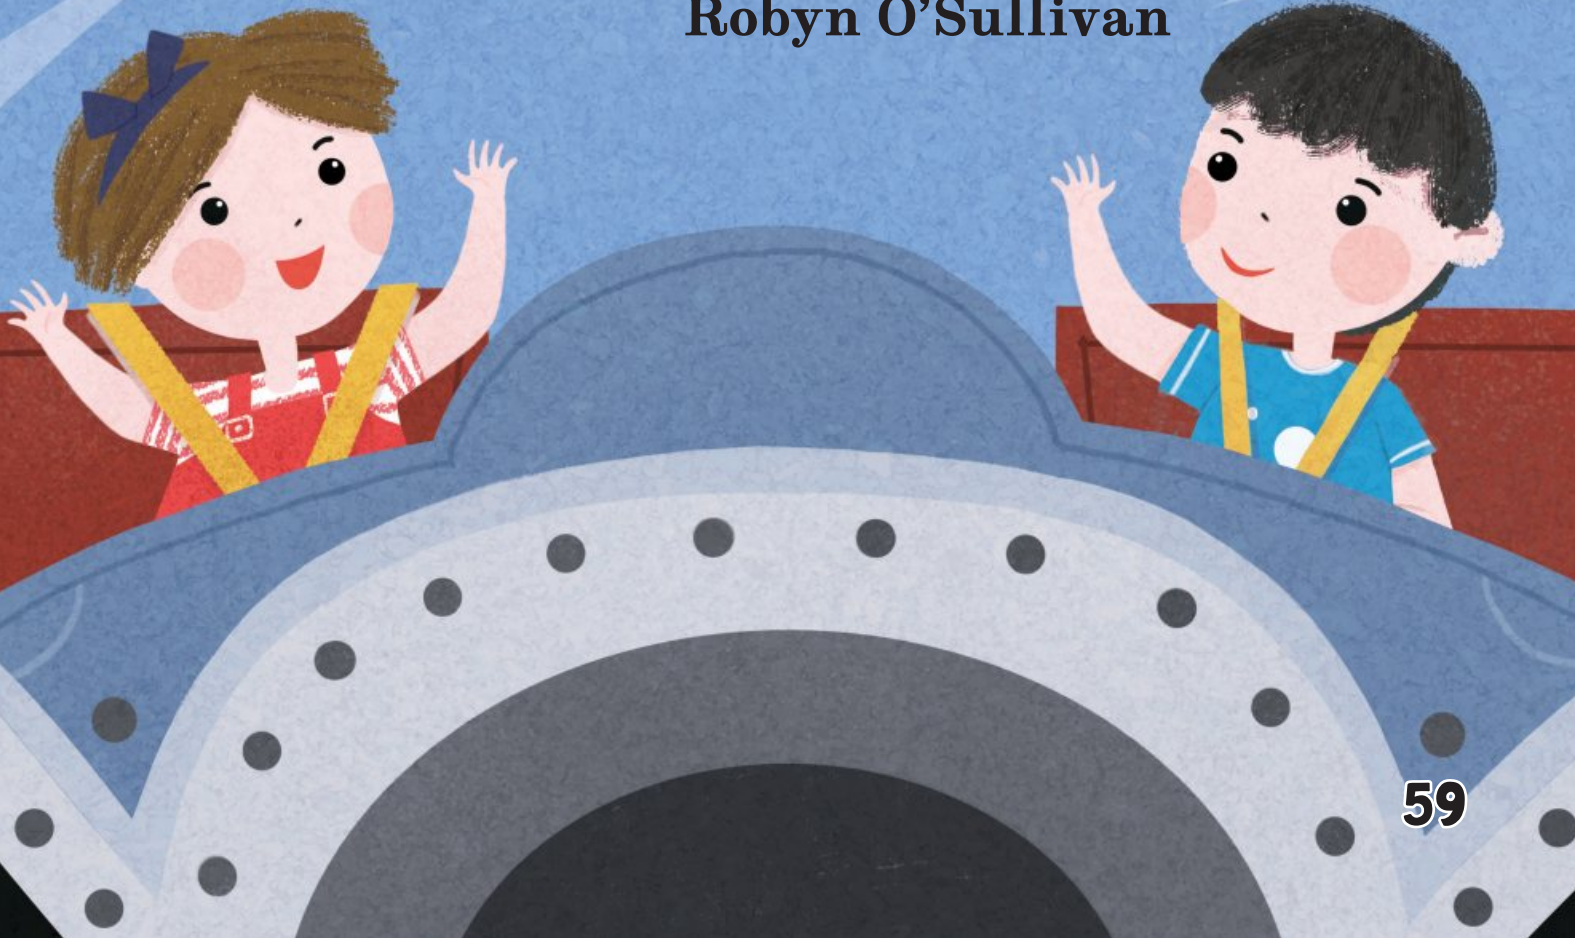

"It's too big for a crocodile," said Dad.

Mara and Jeff came to the Space Museum. Jenny, the guide was waiting for them.

"Look over here," said Jenny.
"These are the astronauts' suits."
"Wow! They must be heavy!" said Mara.
"How cool!" said Jeff.

"These are rocket models. Rockets send spaceships and astronauts into space," Jenny told them.

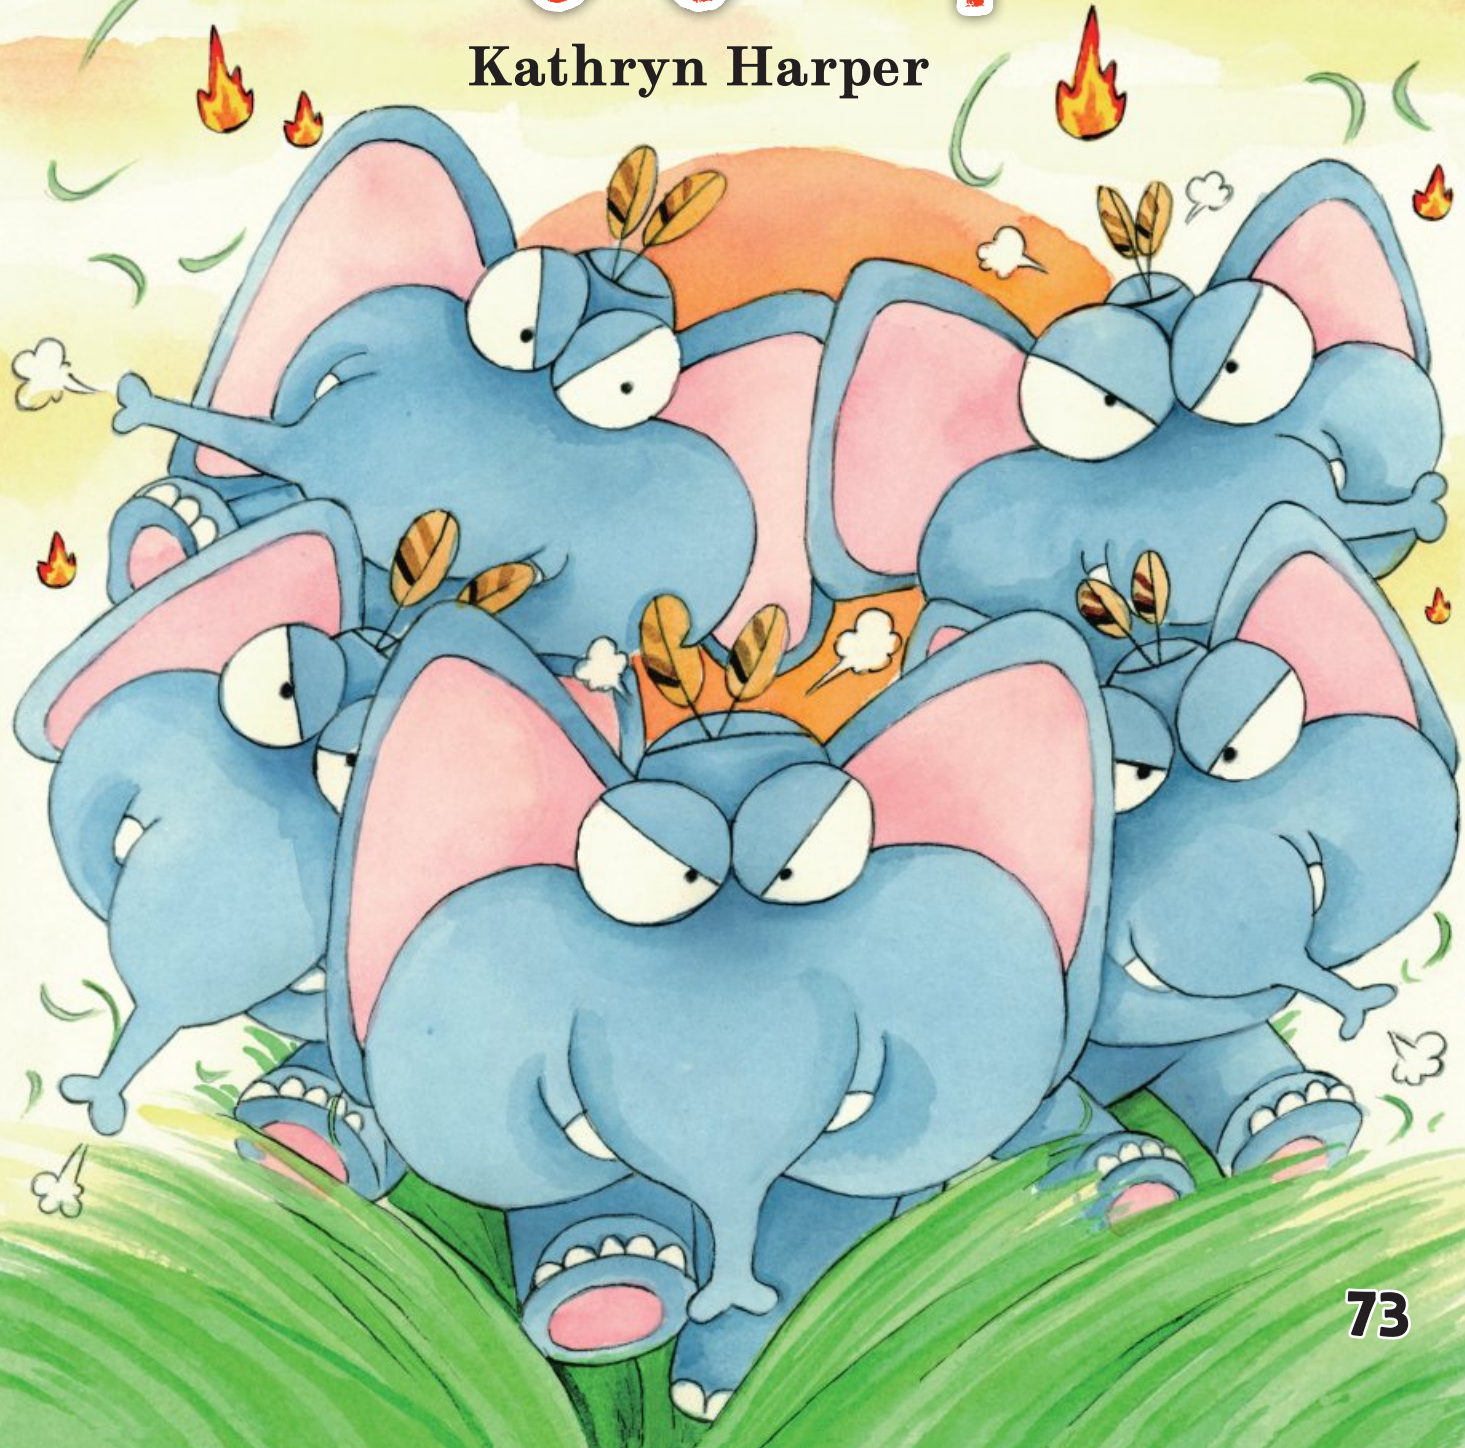

"I wish I could fly a spaceship," said Jeff.
"This is a spaceship model. You two can go into it for a ride," said Jenny.

"I have a sore throat," I say.
"Take this syrup," says Mom.

"I hate medicine!" I say. "I would rather fight five angry elephants than swallow that syrup."
"Five angry elephants!" says Mom.

“No, that’s not right,” I say. “I would rather swim across a stormy sea and fight five angry elephants than swallow that syrup.”

“A stormy sea and five angry elephants!” says Mom. “Wow!”
